

BAN ON DAZZLING LIGHT NEAR ROAD

With dazzling headlights on motor vehicles already illegal, the last legislature went a step farther and enacted a provision which is designed to bring about the elimination of lights besides roads so situated and so brilliant that they interfere with safe driving, according to the legal department of the California State Automobile Association.

This provision declares that it shall be unlawful for any person to place or maintain upon or in view of any public highway a light so brilliant as to blind or dazzle the vision of motorists driving upon the highway to such an extent that a hazard is created. The new law also applies to lights so placed as to prevent a driver from readily recognizing any official traffic sign or signal.

Such lights are declared to be a public nuisance and the State Department of Public Works and local authorities are empowered to have them removed without notice.

WARN TRUCK DRIVERS AGAINST OVERLOADING

Unceasing warfare against overloaded trucks by the California Highway Patrol has resulted in the arrest of 2,877 drivers of such vehicles within the last six months, it is announced in Sacramento.

Records of the patrol show a large percentage of these paid fines, the courts throughout the state concurring in the position of the patrol that such drivers do thousands of dollars worth of damage to the highways with trucks loaded beyond their normal capacity.

A report filed by Inspector A. J. Ford, head of the Bureau of Brakes and Commercial Vehicles, with Superintendent E. Raymond Cato, shows a total of 9,437 trucks checked during the period of January 1 to July 1.

Of these the drivers of 5,641 were warned. Actual arrest citations were issued to 2,877.

Superintendent Cato announced a permanent detail of officers had been assigned to the checking of overloads throughout the state.

The most ambitious airplane stunt now under consideration is a non-stop flight from Brussels, Belgium, to Tokyo, Japan, which is planned by Bert Acosta, one of the pilots on Admiral Byrd's flight to France in 1927. The distance Acosta expects to cover is about 6,000 miles, and prizes aggregating $100,000 will be his if he makes it.

SIDELIGHTS

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, according to an old proverb, and this seems true of the present depression. It is reported that professional promoters have made as high as $200 a week in commissions by collecting funds for the unemployed in Philadelphia.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, who will attempt to reach the North Pole under the ice in a submarine, is quoted as saying: "If we are 50 per cent successful the submarine Arctic expedition will have been worth while." But if his sub gets only 50 per cent of the way back home, we fail to see where the worthwhileness would come in.

A youngster wrote to a New York editor asking "How old is a boy supposed to be before he can do as he pleases?" Came the reply: "We don't know; nobody ever lived that long." Even old Methuselah probably had someone to tell him where to head in now and then.

Rita LeRoy, movie actress, has a knack for business as well as art. A few months ago she bought a stray Russian wolfhound that had been impounded in Los Angeles, for $3. Later the dog appeared with her in a picture and she collected $25 a day for its services.

A fellow in Camden, N. J., tried to make capital out of impersonating Floyd Gibbons, rapid-fire radio broadcaster, who lost an eye while serving as a war correspondent in France. The impostor made the mistake of wearing a patch over the wrong eye, and was fined $100 for his attempted deception.

William Webb, of Washington, was put in jail for turning in ten false alarms in two hours. He can't explain exactly what made him do it, but somehow felt an urge he couldn't resist. Lots of us would get a big kick out of calling out the fire department if we were not afraid of the consequences.

A New York store is said to have a boy regularly employed to act as scapegoat for the firm. When a stupid blunder in delivery or other service is made by someone, this boy is brought before the complaining customer, roundly bawled out, and fired. He meekly takes his hat and leaves, returning later by the back door to be ready for his next "discharge."

Few tears will be shed over the Wickersham Commission, which went out of official existence at the end of the fiscal year because Congress failed to make an appropriation for its continuance. Like most government commissions, it spent a lot of the people's money, and accomplished very little.

"Eddie" Savoy, 74-year-old negro doorman of the State Department in Washington, will hold his job in spite of his enforced retirement by the civil service authorities. A plea for Savoy's retention having failed, Secretary Stimson said he would pay him out of his own pocket. Savoy came to the department when Grant was President, more than 60 years ago.

There is a job for a clever detective in Peabody, Mass., where, according to press reports, police have failed to catch thieves who stole an 86-foot brick chimney.

Rather pathetic is the fact that only one heath hen still lives in America—and it is a rooster. For some time the U. S. Biological Survey has tried to find a mate for this lone bird, which is at large on Martha's Vineyard, but without success, so with his death the species will be extinct. In early times the heath hen was quite numerous and was eaten by Massachusetts colonists in lieu of chicken.

Coming events cast their shadow before—sometimes. Anyway, back in 1913 Tommy McCroskey and Mary Chinn, each aged 5, were principals in a Tom Thumb wedding at a church benefit in Webb City, Missouri. Recently they were really married at the age of 23.

One of the oddest accidents of the season is reported from Tusculum, Alabama. Officers were pouring confiscated whiskey from a barrel into the gutter. Someone dropped a match, which ignited the stream; flames ran back to the barrel, which exploded; a flying stave broke the leg of Foreman Young, 14, who was watching the proceedings.

The Navy will not lack for sailors if a few more families imitate that of Sam Williamson, of North Riverton, R. I., who has six sons in the seagoing branch of Uncle Sam's service. Five are enlisted men and one is a commissioned officer.

A strange condition exists in the North Atlantic this summer which is said to be entirely unprecedented. Usually from 200 to 500 icebergs float down from the Arctic between April and August, but so far not a single berg has been sighted by the Coast Guard ice patrol this year.

HAPPY RAMBLER CLUB NOTES

Mr. William Jari, of San Francisco, paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. H. Rudolph and Mr. and Mrs. S. Hamberg, at Chateau Shack, Emerald Lake, returning home early next morning for his daily grind.

Mr. Doc Thomas, of 143 Tomatoes street, better known as Del Monte street, dropped into Chateau Shack to have lunch with the Hambergs and Rudolphs, who are living at Emerald Lake during the summer. Doc's surprise was a 15-pound watermelon, which of course the ladies don't like. After having a nice lunch, he left for the city without getting even a sniff of the mellow. Doc says the next time he goes to Chateau Shack he will cut out the inside of the mellow, and give the girls, Ruth and Mary, what is left.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Visnevsky and Bernice Hendrickson, and Mrs. Marie Visnevsky, of Sacramento, visited the Hambergs and Rudolphs at their summer home, Chateau Shack, and report having had a splendid time.

Mr. Seth Hamberg and Mr. H. Rudolph enjoy their morning and evening trip to and from Emerald Lake every day.

The members of the Happy Ramblers Club of Daly City have been informed that the Rudolphs, of 341 Winchester street, have added a new attraction to their homestead, consisting of a nice little kitty and a dog by the name of Vanilla. Now they are wondering what will be next.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Thomas and W. Jari made an evening trip to the Chateau Shack on Thursday night of last week.

Mrs. M. Visnevsky and Miss Bernice Hendrickson paid a visit to Mrs. H. Rudolph and Mrs. R. Hamberg and daughter, who are living at Emerald Lake.

Saturday, July 25, Mr. and Mrs. A. Visnevsky, Mr. and Mrs. H. Thomas, Miss M. Sully and Mr. Fred Bradley stopped over night for a rest at the Chateau Shack with the Hambergs and Rudolphs.

Visitors to Centralia, Washington, just now might think they had landed in Russia. All the men of the town are raising beards, to give realism to a pioneer festival to be held there shortly, when scenes of the old Wild West will be reenacted.

Following the example of former President Coolidge, it is said that Will Rogers will take a year's holiday from his newspaper syndication, wisecracking and movie acting. Maybe both Cal and Will are going to take themselves seriously and run for President next year after all.

Cooked automatically with the Electric Range

It doesn't make any difference to the electric range what food you put in its oven. It is simple and easy to have perfect cooking every time and to have it automatically.

In cooking apple pie electrically, you set the oven temperature control to 250 degrees and forget about the pie until the baking time is up.

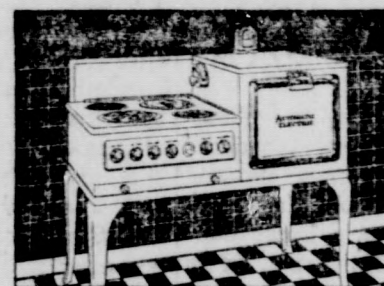

In cooking a roast with vegetables, you have still more freedom. You can place the food in the oven before lunch if you like. At four o'clock the electricity turns on, and the thermostat automatically keeps the oven heat just right. At six o'clock the electricity turns off. When you return home, simply take the food from the oven—hot—and deliciously done.

Electric cooking is clean. As for speed, the oven heats up to 400 degrees in 9 to 11 minutes. New platform cooking elements are faster—as fast as you'd want them. And the electric range is economical—the cost of electricity averages 1c a meal per person.

A few dollars down and a few dollars a month places an electric range in your kitchen. Come into our office and see the electric range.

SUPERVISORS PASS RACING ORDINANCE

The race track ordinance submitted by District Attorney Franklin Swart at a meeting early in June of the San Mateo county board of supervisors, after having been prepared by him at the request of the board at a previous meeting, was passed by the supervisors at their meeting last Monday. The proposed ordinance had been the subject for considerable controversy since the matter was first considered by the board of supervisors.

Resolutions opposing the race track were read from City Councils of San Mateo, San Carlos, Menlo Park, South San Francisco, Hillsborough and Atherton, and from the San Mateo County Association of Improvement Clubs, and the trustees of the Menlo School and Junior College.

The ordinance provides that any closure or place where contests of speed or endurance of, or between beasts, animals or mechanical apparatus are conducted shall be considered as a race track in San Mateo county where such contests are held on more than three days in any week or more than six days in any one month. It also prohibits any race track where the purse or prize exceeds one hundred dollars, and makes it unlawful to offer or accept a purse in excess of this amount.

The ordinance makes it unlawful to enter any animal or mechanical device in any race or contest in which the purse will be in excess of one hundred dollars, and prohibits the holding of any race or contest on two or more consecutive days without first having applied for and received a permit from the board of supervisors.

The ordinance also provides that the board of supervisors upon the receipt of an application for such a permit, shall set a date for hearing and advertise the date in the township where the track is proposed to be built, and if the board finds no objection to granting a permit, it shall be granted for a period of three months, but shall be revocable at any time if the provisions of the ordinance are violated, or if the track is shown to be detrimental to the community in which it is established. The ordinance also provides penalties for the violation of its provisions, and provides that every day during which a race track is conducted in violation of the ordinance shall be considered a separate offense.

MRS. W. F. DORN HONORED GUEST AT LUNCHEON

Mrs. W. F. Dorn, of Riesel street, was the honored guest at a luncheon given in celebration of her birthday, last Tuesday, by the members of the Prunedale Social Club, in her home. The group motored here from Prunedale and Salinas. The table centerpiece was a large fancy decorated cake with the words "Welcome, Prunedale Social Club" inscribed thereon. Mrs. Dorn is the Junior Past President of the organization. After a delightful luncheon the guests motored around San Francisco on a shopping tour. The guests included Mrs. Arnold Lunt, of San Francisco, Mrs. Jules A. Ny, Mrs. Ray Fields, of San Francisco, Mrs. P. G. Miller and daughter Dorothy, Mrs. Ed Brockman, Mrs. Charles Coons, Mrs. Val Nankwill, of Prunedale, Mrs. F. Johnson and Mrs. J. Long of Salinas, and Mrs. Ethel Bolger.

ELECTRICIAN DROPS DEAD

While employed as an electrician by A. Lagomarsino, of Colma, Max Schultze, of San Francisco, aged 36, dropped dead last Friday, the victim of a heart attack. The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., last Monday at 2 P. M. Interment was in Cypress Lawn cemetery. Schultze was well known in Colma and had many friends who will miss him. He was the son of the late Mrs. Magdalene Schultze, and the loving brother of Mrs. Freda Stolz, Conrad and Fred Schrieber.

An Enjoyable Eighteen Day Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansen and daughter Claire, of Acton street, have returned from an eighteen day vacation spent on a motor trip up the Redwood highway to Oregon, and then over the Columbia river highway, and on to Idaho and Utah, where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Nephi Bott, of Logan, who formerly resided in Daly City. They returned through Nevada, and visited Lake Tahoe and Donner Lake. They report terrible heat through all the states through which they passed, and were mighty glad to get back where they could get a breath of cool air.

A group of friends motored from San Francisco to Emerald Lake, where they spent a delightful week end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rudolph and Mr. and Mrs. S. Hamberg.

ASSESSMENT FUNDS NEEDED, SAYS JAMES

County Surveyor James S. James has informed the San Mateo county board of supervisors that it will be necessary for the board to appropriate $15,000 if it is desired that he handle special assessment work next year. James estimates that this sum will be needed for the engineering work to be done by the county under his direction.

The county surveyor estimated that even if it was necessary to use all of $15,000 on special assessment work it would mean a saving of at least $15,000 or $20,000 to the taxpayers by having the work done under the direction of his office instead of by a private engineer.

Members of the board of supervisors received a petition last Monday at their meeting from the city of Atherton, urging that the Ralston avenue short-cut to the San Mateo bay bridge be adopted by the county instead of the Nineteenth avenue extension in the city of San Mateo.

It was pointed out that the Nineteenth avenue extension would be of little value to the south end of the county. The Walters Realty Company offered the supervisors the use of the old Redwood City theatre as a second court room. No action was taken on the offer.

THE GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE SUIT SET FOR SEPTEMBER 15

The hearing of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District friendly test suit to determine the levying rights will be heard by the State Supreme Court on September 15, is was announced following the filing of the action on Thursday of last week.

Chief Justice William H. Waste issued an alternative writ of mandate returnable on that date against W. W. Felt, Jr., secretary of the district, in response to the petition of the district as a public corporation.

The suit was brought at the demand of bond houses who refused to buy the bonds unless the validity of the tax question was settled by the highest court.

W. H. Orrick, special attorney for the district, said that if a decision is given by September 21, it will not be necessary to collect a two-cent special tax levy.

INTERSTATE POWER IN 1930

During 1930 only about 13 per cent of electric power used in this country crossed state lines. The remainder was consumed in the states where it was generated.

The 13 per cent amounted to a small increase over 1929. Three-fourths of the increase was accounted for by two plants—one in Indiana and the other in New Jersey. Much of the remaining increase resulted from changed needs due to deficiency in rainfall in several parts of the country.

Otherwise, the average power crossing state lines showed little change from that of other years. As has been the case since the beginning of the industry, fifty years ago, the greater part of all interstate power has been accounted for by a small number of plants located, by an accident of geography, across state boundaries from the markets for which their power was intended.

Practically all interstate power is regulated by public service commissions in the states where it is sold. The customer is always protected—both in the price for which he buys current and the standards of service he receives.

Somehow it seems that creditors have better memories than debtors.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Charles W. Johnson, former deputy collector of internal revenue at San Jose, was received at the county jail in Redwood City last Friday, to begin a sentence of eight months on a charge of extortion in income tax collections.

J. N. Clayton was arrested at Menlo Park on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He is accused of assaulting F. Furnivall, Menlo Park storekeeper, in a wage dispute.

The proposed widening of B street from Baldwin to Third avenue, in San Mateo, was a step nearer fulfillment following a special meeting of the San Mateo City Council, when a resolution was adopted ordering the work. Bids for the work will be opened at an adjourned session on August 11.

Twenty men and women of foreign birth out of a class of thirty-six were admitted to United States citizenship in the Superior Court at Redwood City last week. The remaining sixteen cases were continued until the next naturalization hearing.

Redwood City will have one of the finest displays of chrysanthemums ever seen in the United States during its Kiku Matsuri, or chrysanthemum festival, which will occur from October 1 to 3. The Japanese Chrysanthemum Growers' Association has voted to supply living flowers to decorate the town during the festival, and will keep fresh flowers on display during the entire time.

The Menlo Park City Council has joined with the councils of South San Francisco, San Carlos and Atherton in opposing by resolution any further extension of horse racing in San Mateo county.

Skidding automobiles in various parts of San Mateo county sent six persons to hospitals with injuries over the week-end, a check of hospitals and police departments revealed.

Twenty-eight cans of Loch Laven trout, containing 40,000 young fish, have been planted for future sport by anglers in Lake Milliken, northeast of Napa.

All the individual estate of the late Matthew L. Rascoe, millionaire Burlingame oil man, will go to his three sons in equal shares, after half of the community property has been received by the widow, Mrs. Betty Rascoe, under terms of a will filed at Redwood City.

When her automobile overturned on the Skyline boulevard, near Half Moon Bay road, Mrs. Isabel Matamoros, of San Francisco, was seriously injured.

Two school districts in San Mateo county were merged this week into larger districts due to the decrease in the number of children attending. The two districts which were abandoned were Sunnyside and San Gregorio. Sunnyside district was merged with La Vista Union and San Gregorio with Pescadero.

While viewing the struggle between Fascism and Bolshevism we prefer to stick to Americanism.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Bad manners on the part of drivers are held by many authorities to be the principal cause of automobile accidents.

According to traffic engineers and statisticians, the accident rate would drop to a minimum if drivers would display a little courtesy in operating their cars by giving way when other machines are passing, and would discontinue crowding cars coming in opposite directions, the unnecessary use of loud horns, driving slowly in the midst of fast-moving traffic, etc.

A survey conducted by the Albert Russel Erskine bureau for street traffic research has shown that the automobile itself is least responsible for accidents. Poor brakes, steering and similar factors cause only a small percentage of mishaps. Human nature has not yet adjusted itself to take advantage of the full efficiency and safety of the modern car. Nine out of ten cars involved in accidents are in perfect condition. Thus, in 90 per cent of cases, accidents result from human carelessness, incompetence or bad judgment.

Good driving manners can cover a multitude of other failings. The driver who resents passing cars, who attempts to hold an undue share of the road, who has no respect for the rights of the pedestrian or other motorist, is a potential killer and destroyer of property. It is against him that future highway safety campaigns must be conducted if they are to show results.

THE PEDDLER NUISANCE

House to house peddlers and solicitors of orders for this and that are becoming an ever greater nuisance to the American home, as any housewife might truthfully testify. Still, the housewife whose home is constantly invaded by these itinerant super-salesmen has the remedy in her own hands.

A timely suggestion along this line is made by Professor Conrad of the New Jersey Teachers' College, who points out that the peddler who boasts that he has a store out of your home. You are expected to furnish a place where he may do business free from the expense which other merchants must pay.

Besides, he insists on making you shop at his convenience, no matter how much it may interfere with your daily routine. He takes up your time arguing you into buying something that in most cases you neither want nor need. Sometimes you buy to get rid of him, when you ought to say:

"This is a home, not a place of business, and I am not going to allow you to use it as a store. Good day."

That might seem rather inconsiderate. But it is one way of discouraging the peddler, who has not the slightest consideration for your peace and comfort, but uses your home as a market place, in unfair competition with home merchants, who pay rent, taxes, license fees, and in other ways contribute to the welfare of the community.

Humorists can't always be good. The later Wickersham reports were not nearly so funny as the one on Prohibition.

LAST MAN'S CLUB

An imitation, with variations, of the famous Last Man's Club of Civil War veterans organized at Stillwater, Minn., more than half a century ago, is seen in the formation of a club of World War veterans in Edgar county, Illinois.

The Stillwater outfit put aside a bottle of wine to be drunk by the last survivor of the club. It is currently reported that when the "last man" opened his bottle in was found that the wine had turned to vinegar, probably in deference to the Prohibition law.

Somewhat different is the scheme of the Illinois veterans. Their Last Man's Club starts off with 100 members, each of whom is to contribute one dollar a year to the club's treasury. When the roll has been reduced to ten, the fund thus created is to be divided among these survivors.

From insurance company statistics it is estimated that this division of the "jack-pot" will occur about the year 1981. The ten survivors at that time would probably be between 80 and 90 years old.

Advancement in medicine and surgery in the meantime may possibly be the means of extending the lives of these veterans, so that the fund being created may not be distributed as soon as is now estimated. It is likely that some of them will still be alive when the year 2000 rolls around.

THE AUTOGIRO

Aircraft manufacturers have long dreamed of the time when the general public would be air-minded enough to create a demand for their product comparable with the demand for automobiles. But the conventional type of airplane has not been developed to a standard of safety and ease of operation to inspire its widespread private use.

The introduction of the revolutionary autogiro may mark the beginning of a new era in aviation. This "windmill" plane, with its lifting propeller blades above the fuselage, makes ascent and descent in a limited space possible. The dangers of a forced landing are practically eliminated because it can be set down in an emergency almost anywhere, while the regular airplane must have a considerable level space in which to be stopped after touching the ground at relatively high speed.

Recent tests have demonstrated the safety of the autogiro, but at present the machine is costly, and until it can be produced at an attractive price its use will be restricted to wealthy devotees of the flying art.

The skill of American engineers may be depended upon, however, to gradually bring the price of the autogiro within the reach of the average person who wishes to experience the thrill of flying at a minimum of risk.

A GREAT ROAD YEAR

Programs of Federal, State and local governments for 1931 road construction call for a total expenditure of $1,616,000,000—an increase of $150,000,000 over 1930. The Federal government's contribution of $249,897,000 is $150,000,000 over 1930.

The problem of unemployment has perhaps been the most potent factor in increasing road budgets—coupled with the genuine need for more and better roads in a great many states. The farm-to-market road movement is coming in for an increasing attention and more communities are finding that full-width, weatherproof, all-year-round roads are essential to agriculture in this modern age.

It might be said that the money we spend for roads gives us a better return than almost any other form of government tax expenditures. Quick and economical transport, of goods and persons, is vital to social and economical progress. Particularly is this true of those rural areas where roads have been in essentially the same state of unimprovement since the horse and wagon days. Only by building inexpensive, but good roads, can farming sections be given a place in the march forward.

THE SILVER PROBLEM

It is announced that the world silver problem is to be studied by a committee of experts appointed by the International Chamber of Commerce.

These experts, representing the United States, Great Britain, China, and perhaps other countries, will be selected on the basis of their knowledge both of silver and economics.

Whatever recommendations the committee makes will be received with interest throughout the world. Low silver prices—largely brought on by the fact that most nations have gone to the gold standard of coinage—play an important part in the business depression. The various governments interested in silver must agree on a policy for its stabilization, and such investigations as the one now projected should produce invaluable information with which to work.

The use of more toothpicks is being urged as an aid to the lumber industry.

The author of "Happy Married Life" is said to be using his royalties to pay alimony.

WHO LIKES HIS JOB?

Several instances have come to notice recently which seem to discredit the old theory that in order to be a success one should follow a congenial line of work.

It is said that the late Joseph Conrad, the most famous of recent authors of sea stories, hated the sea and detested writing.

O. O. McIntyre tells of a leading and successful New York theatrical producer who has a deep antipathy to actors and actresses and despises the theatre; also of a man who has made a fortune as a florist, but who does not care for flowers and is nauseated by their perfume.

Now comes Irving S. Cobb, one of America's most famous writers and humorists, with the statement that he utterly dislikes writing, but keeps at it because he doesn't want to be a loafer, or words to that effect.

The average newspaper man will tell you that he loathes the eternal grind, but somehow you could not drive him out of it. Many musicians suffer mental torture when before an audience—and so it goes.

These may be exceptions to the rule, but the lesson to be drawn from the instances noted is that determination to do good work will develop ability and bring success, whether one likes his job or not.

NEW SCIENCE TRIUMPH

Thousands of years ago mankind learned to use fire in cooking his food, but not until recently did he learn another of nature's open secrets—how to render foods imperishable by employing the same refrigeration principle that nature uses in polar regions.

Although Arctic explorers have often testified to the efficacy of 50 and 60-below-zero cold in keeping their musk-ox meat and fish deliciously edible for months in a frozen state, it remained for an American scientist, Clarence Birdseye, to find the way to duplicate the polar refrigeration in warmer climates.

Years of hard work and experimentation have resulted in Birdseye's perfecting a quick-freezing process by which meats, seafoods, poultry, vegetables and fruit are frozen at 50 below zero in a manner that does not permit them to lose any of their fresh flavor or appearance, even though they are kept hard-frozen for months.

It is fitting, in this age of mechanical wonders, that science has made a contribution to the food field comparable in significance with the motor car, the radio, the airplane, the motion picture and the other new and important additions to life's enjoyment.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla. Ernest Drury, operator of the William Taylor and Whitcomb hotels in San Francisco, and far-seeing young hotel man of the Pacific Coast, sat in his office recently and outlined to me his reasons for his faith in the future, not only for his own business, but for this entire community "beside the Golden Gate."

Today Ernest Drury views the vast Pacific as the future highway for commerce of undreamed proportions. He looks upon the ten million dollars now being spent in the construction of the new trans-Pacific liners as one of the advance evidences of what is shortly to come in this western world. Mr. Drury said:

"With the stabilization of the government in China and the standardization of silver, two of the greatest deterrents to the development of trans-Pacific trade are about to be set aside. 'Australia, at present overcoming the depression of the past few years, is to be another of the great markets of our goods and the source of unlimited future travel to our shores.'

"Modern transportation annihilates the old handicaps of time and distance on the Pacific. We are, indeed, on the verge of a new era in human achievement, having its most immediate expression in the countries bordering on the Pacific.

"San Francisco, as the greatest of all Pacific ports, will be the focal point of this new seat of world commerce."

TOMORROW'S HOME

It has been forecast that by 1940 the consumption of electricity in this country will have increased to 172,000,000 kilowatt-hours annually.

This is a somewhat amazing statement, as only 91,000,000 kilowatt-hours were generated in 1930, and as electric service already goes to some 20,000,000 of the 29,000,000 American homes. However, these 20,000,000 dwelling places are not truly "electrified." In the modern home of the future, the owner will press a button and electricity will do the rest. Where homes now use 550 kilowatt-hours of current a year, those of tomorrow will use 1,000 to 5,000. The home of 1940 or 1950 will be as superior to those of the present as they, in turn, are of those of 1900.

Apparatus invented by a St. Louis man answers a telephone call when its owner is absent by informing the caller when he will return, and records a message when desired.

PIGEON VETERAN DIES

"Charlie," veteran of many battlefields, is dead. He was a famous carrier pigeon, stationed at Lille, France, during four years of German occupation of that city, from which he carried hundreds of important messages to the allied generals, sent by his owner, an Englishman named Richardson.

Charlie's services were recognized by the French government by a pension of two francs a month granted him since the war. He was buried with military honors.

Throughout the World War hundreds of carrier pigeons were employed as message bearers and many authentic stories of real heroism on the part of these wonderful birds have been told. One that is remembered was that of a pigeon which carried a message through shell torn territory, was wounded to death while on the wing, but delivered its message and expired in the hands of the officer who received it.

Human beings never display greater courage and fidelity than that.

By his adamant resistance to critics Chairman Stone of the Federal Farm Board appears to be living up to his name.

A man touring Europe sent back a picture postcard bearing this message: "Dear Son: On the other side you will see a picture of the rock from which the Spartans used to throw their defective children. Wish you were here. Your Dad."—Wall Street Journal.

GRADE FARM PRODUCTS

No farmer would expect to sell at a good price a barrel filled with onions, cucumbers, turnips and potatoes all mixed together. It is almost as foolish to expect to get the best market price for a barrel of a single product in which all sorts are dumped without regard to size, color or cleanliness.

By neglecting to properly grade their produce, many farmers must sell it for much less than might be obtained for the same stuff by exercising a little care in preparing it for the market. In discussing this important phase of marketing an expert says:

"Quality and uniformity in grains, fruit, cotton, potatoes, dairy and poultry products command a premium from the buyer. A crate of large, clean eggs of uniform color will bring more in a central market than one in which small, dirty, many colored eggs are included. Dirty potatoes of mixed sizes sell poorly alongside of clean ones which have been graded."

The difference in price between graded and ungraded products often means the difference between profit and loss in farming operations.

THE SKYLINE BOULEVARD NOW IN SPLENDID SHAPE

The Skyline boulevard is now in splendid condition from Fleishacker pool to the Burlingame road, as the road has been completely resurfaced with oiled macadam.

Oiling operations are under way between the Burlingame road and the Half Moon Bay road. One-half of the route is being worked on at a time and traffic taken through the other half by a patrol car. Some short delays will be necessary. The balance of the Skyline boulevard is in exceptionally good condition.

There are 193 farms within the city limits of New Orleans, averaging 11.2 acres each, on which nearly 2,000 persons earn their livelihood.

MANY EVENTS LURE MOTORIST THROUGHS

California motorists and the multitude of tourist visitors are offered an inviting array of attractions this month. A variety of community events arranged as part of California's Fiesta Year program are scheduled for August, providing interesting objectives for near or distant trips, according to the touring department of the California State Automobile Association. The attention attracted by the series of Fiesta Year offerings is regarded as one of the reasons for an increase of more than 15 per cent in the number of motor tourists from other states during the first six months of 1931.

August finds the season of county fairs getting under way, with the Santa Barbara county fair at Santa Maria, the 11th to 15th; Del Norte county at Crescent City, 21st to 22nd; San Joaquin county at Stockton, together with a horse show, 24th to 30th; and Humboldt county at Ferndale, 26th to 30th. Also of outstanding interest are the annual apple show at Sebastopol this week; San Mateo county's national horse show at Menlo, August 8 to 15, and the melon festival at Turlock, August 17 to 22.

On the last Saturday of the month an event of wide interest among good roads enthusiasts will be the dedication of Pioneer bridge, near Yreka, marking the opening of the newly completed relocation of the Shasta Canyon section of the Pacific Highway, U. S. 99. The Yreka Lions Club is directing arrangements for the program. Governor Rolph, Governor Meier of Oregon, and other officials will take part.

One of the most colorful and typically California events of the month will be the "Old Spanish Days" fête at Santa Barbara, August 27 to 29, an annual affair. Other offerings on the August list are: Redwood Rodeo, at Fortuna, 14th to 16th; outdoor comedy, Forest Theatre, Carmel, 20th to 22nd; flower show, Los Altos, 21st.

Studebaker Free Wheeling makes me want to go places and do things

MOTORING was almost becoming commonplace.

Some men were saying: "I don't care anything about automobiling; I buy a car for transportation!"

Then Studebaker gave us Free Wheeling and put the thrill back into motoring (and a 15% to 20% saving in oil and gas). Now adults get the same joy out of driving a car that children get out of tobogganing, skating or chuting the chutes.

Motoring is again an OUTDOOR SPORT.

Now that you can buy a Free Wheeling Studebaker for $845, it's perfectly all to buy a car without it—aren't I right?

This $845 Studebaker, by the way, is the lowest priced Six with Free Wheeling as standard equipment—engineered from tip to tail to give you the fullest benefits of Free Wheeling in its finest form.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

Farm bureau folk to the number of 300 attended the July meeting of the Garden Grove Farm Center, when national and State Farm Bureau officials were guests of the local center.

The California Highway Patrol's warfare against overloaded trucks was reported to have resulted in the arrest of 2877 drivers within the past six months. A report shows a total of 9437 trucks checked during the period of January 1 to July 1, with 5641 drivers warned and 2877 citations actually issued.

Referring to the forest fire evil, Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur of the Department of the Interior said in a recent speech before the American Forestry Association, "There ought to be a law requiring an intelligence test for tobacco users to determine if those with sense enough to light a cigarette have sense enough to put it out."

Some records were broken for attendance and interest in farm problems at the Western States Farm Bureau Conference held at Santa Ana during the week of July 6, when some 600 Farm Bureau leaders from the eleven Western States gathered to confer with national officers and committees on the outstanding farm issues of the day.

Director of Agriculture Moulton has announced appointment of Dr. Joseph J. King, San Francisco, as chief of the Division of Animal Husbandry, succeeding Dr. J. P. Iverson. In announcing the change, Moulton said: "I intend the department shall be kept well informed regarding cattle diseases and conditions, and that such information shall be available at all times to any producer in the State."

General Grant tree, in Grant National Park, is the world's largest Sequoia Gigantea, it was revealed at Fresno following the report of a survey made by four engineers. Running sadly behind until the last, General Grant, with an advantage of more than 100,000 board feet, was acclaimed the winner over the General Sherman tree in the Sequoia National Park, the Boole tree in Converse Basin and other huge contenders.

More than 6,000 Spanish War Veterans and members of their families are expected to travel to the Veterans' Home at Yountville, Napa County, Sunday, August 9, to celebrate the fall of Manila thirty-three years ago. Plans for the celebration were announced recently by Charles W. Bennett senior vice commander of the United War Veterans, in charge of arrangements. United States Senator Samuel M. Shortridge will speak. Governor Rolph will be a guest.

High prices for lemons in the east were reflected in the distribution of $200,000 by the Upland Lemon Growers' Association within a period of ten days. The amounts received by the growers are not over large, but the frequency with which the dividends are issued is setting a new mark. L. R. Bradley, manager of the association, pointed out that the season will show an average financial return for the growers, but that never before in the association's history have checks been issued so frequently.

There were 2,110,112 persons of foreign white stock in California when the decennial census was taken last year, according to figures announced by the census bureau recently. This number consisted of 810,034 foreign born white persons and 1,300,078 native white persons of foreign or mixed parentage. Of the foreign born whites, 107,279 were born in Italy, 101,445 in Canada, 85,019 in England, 81,840 in Germany, 44,047 in Russia and 43,734 in Sweden. For practically all of the countries in the tabulation, the number of foreign born returned in 1930 was materially larger than the number in 1920. A great decrease was shown in the total number of persons returned as foreign born white with country of birth Mexico.

Although the Eucalyptus has for half a century been the most widely planted tree in California, its species in common cultivation have been restricted. The Blue Gum alone is widespread. Groves and groves of it are found all over the State, especially from Santa Barbara south to San Diego. The range of this widely planted tree has been not confined to the coast but has extended into hot interior valleys and semi-desert country. Because it early proved its adaptability to climatic exigencies, withstanding drought and even prospering under adverse conditions, the Blue Gum, Eucalyptus globulus, was accepted as a boon by Californians. Today it is regarded as being in almost the same class as the natives.

The bean thrip is appearing in cotton fields in Merced and Fresno counties, according to a report by Stewart Lockwood, entomologist of the California Department of Agriculture, who recently returned from a survey of the southern cotton districts. Growers are urged by Mr. Lockwood to keep their cotton irrigated as often as possible. "Bean thrips," he says, "like a hot, dry climate and irrigation tends to check the damage caused by this pest, as there is no known insecticide that will control bean thrips in cotton."

Oakland was chosen as the scene of the 1932 convention of the Pacific Society of Printing House Craftsmen, according to word received from Seattle, where the annual meeting was held this year. Delegates selected H. F. Edmonds of Los Angeles as president.

Out of the situation created by scorching heat and searing forest fires throughout California there came one good piece of news. It was said vacationists and tourists need not refrain from going up into the tall timbers under fear of being drafted to fight fires. There are plenty of unemployed anxious and willing to be drafted, State and Federal officials announced. Outside of small brush fires the fire situation in Northern California is said to be well in hand.

Pacific Air Transport planes carrying mail, passengers and express over the 1206 mile airway between Seattle, San Francisco and San Diego scored a perfect performance record during June. S. A. Stimpson, western traffic manager, announced recently. Tri-motored passenger and mail transports flying on the daylight schedule and mail passenger planes on the night service flew a total of 112,552 miles. During this period 33,000 pounds of air mail was carried on the two round trip schedules operated daily.

World-wide interest is being shown in tickets for the Games of the Tenth Olympiad, to be held in Los Angeles from July 30 to August 14, 1932, according to an announcement by the Organizing Committee for the Games. Reservations were opened four weeks ago. Since then, reservations have come in from all the Olympic countries of the world and from every State in the Union. A special machine is being installed in the ticket department to number reservations in the order of their receipt, according to Jack MacKenzie, ticket manager.

Plans for the 1931 California State Fair, to be held in Sacramento during the week of September 5 to 12, are going forward with indications pointing to one of the greatest expositions in the history of the State, according to recent reports. A quarter of a million dollars has been invested in two new buildings which will be ready for occupancy this season. One of the buildings will house poultry exhibits and the other will hold the sheep and swine exhibits. Exhibitors will be competing for $125,000 in premiums, prizes and purses, according to the fair directors.

A $459,772 contract for grading 12.5 miles of the Ridge Route alternate between Piru Creek and Gorman, Los Angeles county, was awarded by the State Department of Public Works to Morrison-Knudsen Company, and McDonald & Kahn, San Francisco. This project is the third and last unit in the first stage of construction of the Ridge Route alternate. When completed it will obviate the use of the long climb over the Ridge Route when traveling between Los Angeles and the San Joaquin Valley. The new route will be twenty-seven miles between Castaic school and Tejon Pass as compared with 36.5 miles by the existing Ridge Route.

The director of the census has announced the results of the tabulation of the population returns for California by marital condition. The total number of males 15 years of age and over in the State on April 1, 1930, was 2,285,734. Of this number 808,399, or 35.4 per cent were single; 1,307,050, or 57.2 per cent, were married; 4.4 per cent were widowed; and 2.6 per cent were divorced. Of the 2,096,630 females, 466,836, or 22.3 per cent were single; 1,286,461, or 61.4 per cent, were married; 12.9 per cent were widowed; and 3.3 per cent were divorced. The proportion single among the males in California decreased 2.8 per cent and the proportion married increased 2.6 per cent between 1920 and 1930. Otherwise there has been very little change in the percentage single, married, or widowed, between 1920 and 1930.

Exceptional activity in highway construction and maintenance, coupled with the harvesting of fruit and grain crops, created a moderate improvement in employment conditions throughout California in June. It is stated in the monthly report of Walter G. Mathewson, State director of Employment for the United States Department of Labor, issued recently. In addition to the many cutting sheds and dry yards in operation on apricots, approximately forty canneries were engaged in the canning of this fruit, giving employment to several thousand fruit workers. The State reported 109 contracts under way for road work at an estimated cost of $15,245,655 and the construction of thirty-three bridges at an estimated cost of $2,557,793. Bids for additional highway construction are to be opened during the next thirty days. Employment in the building industry should be stimulated within the next two months by contracts already awarded but on which work has not yet started, the report predicts.

Supt. C. G. Thomson of Yosemite National Park announced the road between Mather Station and O'Shaughnessy Dam is held open for traffic only between 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m. daily. The road is being paved. The Lake Eleanor road was closed for the season July 24.

Another queer work of nature was added to the "freaks of nature" collection of the Tulare County Board of Trade. Frank Logan, rancher, brought in a large potato, which closely resembled a reclining cat.

Evolution of Money

Salt Merchant of Morocco, Whose Salt Is Also Used for Money.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ETHIOPIA (Abyssinia), which has hitherto got along without a money of its own, is taking steps toward establishing a currency and coinage system on a gold basis. Most of the citizens are now using for their purchases bars of salt, rifle cartridges, and even empty bottles and tin cans. The money necessary in international dealings has been furnished in limited supply by Maria Theresa Thalers, introduced a number of years ago from Austria, and by a small amount of paper money issued by a branch of the National Bank of Egypt established in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. This bank is to be purchased by the Ethiopian government as a first step in its program to set up a currency and coinage system.

When Ethiopia issues her first bank notes and certificates, these bits of inked paper will represent the latest link in the very long chain of the evolution of money. In earliest times man traded or bartered one product or article for another. But the need for a common denominator of value became apparent even with the first glimmerings of civilization. The skins of animals served in this way when man was still a hunter, while shells became the first money of tribes living near the sea. When man settled down and became an agriculturist or a herdsman, grain and cattle came into use as his measures of values. The ox was "big money," the sheep "small change."

There were certain disadvantages in using live stock as money. For one thing, it might walk away in the night; for another, it consumed much provender. There were difficulties about very small change for the purchase of such edibles as kettles of fish and messes of pottage.

The human geography of the Near East, which had been pastoral, about this time got an industrial urge. A way had been found of extracting a metal from the earth of the island of Cyprus, handily set in the eastern Mediterranean. The Romans later twisted the name of this island in such a way that the modern word "copper" was derived from it.

How Copper Became Money. Copper pots began to appeal, and, like cattle, were universally prized. Merchants would exchange whatever they had in their stalls for copper pots, and the demand for them was more nearly universal than for any other object. The copper pot was, therefore, money.

Then into this region came one imbued with an idea of importance. Instead of presenting pots for use in facilitating barter, he would tender the copper of which they were made. He would offer it in a convenient form, made up into a strip which he called obolus. No definite idea of its size survives, but it was said that six made a handful. The obolus marked a great advance toward the use of coin.

The scene shifted to the west. Italy, as it awoke from barbarism, adopted a unit of copper as a measure of value. It called the unit as, a Roman pound of 12 unciae, or ounces, and it came into general use.

Copper served the purpose of money because of its intrinsic value. The as had the value of a pound of copper. Human nature being the same then as now, it soon came to pass that people made the as in a weight a little less than a pound and profited to the extent of the metal thus saved. They learned to mix certain quantities of baser and cheaper metals with the copper and their currency deteriorated.

Thus a step toward the development of actual money was forced on the nations. Governing powers found it necessary to step into the breach, to test metals used as money, to put their stamps guaranteeing quality and weight upon them, and by this avenue copper coins arrived.

As the centuries passed in the Mediterranean area, copper became plentiful and its purchasing power decreased.

Rome was getting much of the earth of Cyprus. Thus it developed that an average householder of ancient Rome, going to market to buy for a feast day, would need to pack a donkey to bear the weight of the copper for his shopping.

The metal came to be too bulky in proportion to its value. Yet it held its place until another metal appeared that better served money purposes. That metal was silver. The map of the civilized world was expanding. Spain had begun to produce.

Civilization moved westward and Charlemagne established an empire of the French in the Eighth century on a silver standard. He formally decreed that the pound of silver should be the basic measure of value, and a continent accepted his edict. So it happens that in France today the word argent means "money," although its literal significance is "silver."

Money of England.

Money history began to be written in another geographical area. The English began to talk of the "pound" in designating a money unit. This is the silver pound of Charlemagne.

Originally 240 pennies were made from the pound of silver, and although the pound (sterling) has become a measure of value and not of weight, the relation to the old value standard continues—240 pence to the pound (sterling).

The English word "shilling" has a geographical origin that is quite different. It was first used by the blonde barbarians of the North. These warriors and their opponents were given to wearing rings and arm bands made of silver or gold. After battles the rings of the slain were highly prized by the victors, and were gathered and properly distributed by an official who had charge of this division of spoils. He was known as the ring-breaker and was actually the first treasury official of these northern tribes.

The rings were so made that they broke up into bits of a somewhat uniform size. One fragment was called a "schillingas." In the North it was an early form of money, and from it came the shilling, so dear to the English heart today.

The world was short of actual money from Caesar to Columbus. There was little progress during that long stretch and there appears to be some soundness in the theory that the absence of a circulating medium of sufficient quantity to make development possible was, in part, the reason for the stagnation. Yet, despite its scarcity, money events were taking place about the map of Europe and seem, in retrospect, to have been in preparation for the coming of better days.

Origin of the Dollar.

Toward the end of the time of shortage there appeared in the interior of medieval Europe an individual who was to write a chapter of money history that has come down strangely into modern times, and to give a new nation of the West a currency unit that was to have a profound effect. This man made the first dollar in all the world, and gave it a name—which, though the etymology is not apparent at a glance, becomes upon examination the lineal ancestor of the word "dollar."

The count of Schlick, for such was his title, dwelt in St. Joachimsthal (Joachim's Dale), a mining region of Bohemia. The patron saint of the community was St. Joachim.

Here the count of Schlick, in 1516, appropriated a silver mine. As his retainers took out the precious metal, the master laid his finger to his temple and considered the purpose to which he should put it. He must have been a man of perception, for he seemed to realize that he dwelt in a money-hungry world, and that his silver would serve best if made into coin.

At any rate, he devised a new one all his own. On its face appeared a reproduction of St. Joachim, and it was named after that personage and the community which gave it birth—Joachimsthal. It was the first dollar.

Now note the evolution of the word "dollar" from this, its polysyllabic ancestor. When the Joachimsthaler found its way into medieval Germany it was warmly welcomed. A practical people, however, soon tired of the length of its name, and by a judicious dropping of syllables it became the "thaler." The word in this form still survives in Germany.

When the thaler passed into the Netherlands its pronunciation was somewhat changed. Ther it was called the "daler." Then it crossed to England, where, by use of the broad "a," daler became "dollar." Under this modified name and geographically transplanted, the Joachimsthaler of the count of Schlick has grown and prospered.

THE STORY

Harold Norman Atridge, an orphan, lives with his great-aunt Matilda, who reared him. At her death he finds himself penniless. At the close of the war he gets work in a bank. Taking a message to Marjorie Clarence, he finds her father in the throes of delirium tremens. Harold promises to take Marjorie into the country next day. They have an exciting day. They miss the last train back to London.

"Can't be done," said Mr. Buckley. "I got a job. Meeting an old boy and his wife on the eleven-twenty from London and taking them three miles over to Highfields."

"But when you come back?" asked Marjorie pitifully.

"Might be done then," said Mr. Buckley, and their hearts rose again until they had to swallow hard to retain them at all.

"Where d'you want to go?" "Morley Park. Not as far as London," said Harold.

"Do it for three quid," said Mr. Buckley.

Harold thought of the three pound notes in his pocketbook, and the two half-crowns in his pocket, and agreed, feebly and thankfully.

"Right," said Mr. Buckley with decision. "I'll be back here by—um—ah—twelve o'clock. See you then? Right." He shut the door. The babes in the wood had only an hour and a quarter to wait.

They spent that hour and a quarter on the roadside. It was cold and dark and uncomfortable. Harold thought frequently of the half-bun he had left behind when they started for home. Even the thought of a seven-hours-sat-on half-bun was painfully appetizing at the moment. Marjorie sat with her feet in the ditch, huddled in her raincoat, and leaned against Harold's knees in a sort of stupor of misery. It was after the village church clock had struck midnight that Mr. Buckley's car came rattling down the road.

"What's the address?" asked Mr. Buckley.

Harold told him. "Go toward Morley common," he added feebly. "I'll tell you where to go when we're getting near."

Then at last, with a grinding of gears and a jerk, they were off.

Mr. Buckley's car, besides being past its first youth, did not boast side curtains. The wind of their progress whirled round their shivering forms, blew straight through the exiguous rug on their knees, and sought out remorselessly every chink and opening in their clothing. Marjorie's teeth were chattering. Harold put his arms about her and clasped her to him, but the gesture was not one of affection. It was ever, as much one of self-defense as it was of protection to Marjorie. A chilly, horrible hour and a half.

At Morley Park North station, Harold redirected Mr. Buckley, and at the corner of Ashford road they stopped. Harold helped a frozen Marjorie to alight, and then handed over a reluctant three pounds to Mr. Buckley. At any rate, they were home.

Perhaps it would be in better taste not to describe that homecoming in detail. There was Marjorie's pitiful knock at the door. Then Mrs. Tilling's opening of it—a horrible apparition in dressing gown and curling papers. Her violent denunciation of Marjorie, and then, on her seeing Marjorie's pitiful condition, her rounding upon Harold. She baldly accused him of seduction. She blared out all sorts of threats about police and about civil processes. And then she slammed the door upon him, and left him writhing on the doorstep.

Harold began his walk back to Scaef Fell View in a decidedly unpleasant frame of mind. He was hungry and cold and tired. He had been threatened with prosecution. He had spent much money. As nearly as he could tell, not knowing the etiquette of these matters, he was engaged to be married, and he was not at all sure that he wanted to be.

In the last two days Destiny had upset all Harold's habits, had blacked his eye and starved him with a woman, to say nothing of practically shutting and locking in his face the doors of his own club. Quite a good start, but, in the opinion of Destiny, nothing more than a start. Destiny giggled hysterically and plunged again into her conjurer's top-hat to see what further surprise she could find for him.

Harold plodded feebly across Morley common. The best way to Scaef Fell View was along a narrow footpath, muddy in winter and dusty in summer, which wound among the gorse pushes from one side of the common to the other. There was naturally not a soul about, it being half past one in the morning.

As Harold ascended a slight rise and turned a corner of the path a hundred yards from the road he saw a motor car with glaring headlights stationary at the roadside under a street lamp. There were two men furiously at work changing one of the back wheels; another was striding up and down beside the car impatiently, and, apparently, anxiously. So much Harold noticed, dully. Then things began to happen.

Another pair of glaring headlights appeared far down the road. In an incredibly short space of time they tore up to the stationary car. With a shriek and clamor of brakes the new arrival stopped dead beside the other car. Instantly half a dozen dark forms detached themselves before it had even properly stopped, and hurled themselves upon the three men. There was a struggle and a sharp cry.

As Harold watched, open-mouthed, some one broke away from the struggling mass, and fled on to the common. Some one else shouted and plunged after him. The writhing bundle heaved simultaneously, and a hand shot out of the confusion, caught the pursuer's ankle, and brought him down head-first with a shattering crash upon the pavement. But at the same instant two red flashes split the darkness behind the headlights, and two smashing reports echoed across the common.

One bullet screamed through the air two yards from Harold's ear, making him leap as though stung. The other apparently found a more substantial billet, for the wretched man running in Harold's direction pitched head over heels like a shot rabbit right at Harold's feet.

Automatically Harold bent over him. In the faint light he was conscious of a bearded and spectacled face contorted with agony. The stranger clearly was not dead, for he struggled to raise himself to a sitting position. His coat and waistcoat were torn wide open in the front, so that his white shirt showed up plainly. His right hand clutched a bulky black object which revealed itself clearly to Harold's goggling eyes as an automatic pistol. His left hand held a small leather case from which dangled two broken straps. The stranger's eyes met Harold's, and flashed with despairing hatred. He made a convulsive movement with the pistol, but his arm gave way before he could point it at him, and he fell back with a groan. As he did so, with one last failing effort he dashed the leather case into Harold's face.

All this happened with unbelievable rapidity. It was not more than five seconds after Harold had topped that low rise that Harold found himself clutching the case in his hands and still bending over the dead or unconscious stranger.

Then came another shout from the motor cars. Two or three men were plunging toward him; two or three more were huddled in contorted attitudes on the pavement. Somebody shouted. Again there came a flash and a report, and something cut through a furze branch at Harold's elbow. The only thing Harold's muddled brain could think of was to set his weary legs into action once more. He turned and bolted across the dark common.

Up-to-Date Youngster

A new nurse was engaged in the household of one of our most advanced doctors, and the first night, toward eight o'clock, she settled down with a book of fairy stories to read the doctor's daughter to sleep.

The child, aged six and very "modern," listened placidly through "Peter Piper," dozed over "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," and seemed to be sound asleep during the reading of "Jack and Jill," until suddenly, at the end of the poem, she started wide awake again. The poem ends, you will remember, with something about "tum-tum-tum, and Jack mended his crown with vinegar and brown paper." "Why, isn't that awful!" cried the child, gazing horror-stricken at the nurse. "Didn't he even have an X-ray taken?"

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

If parents will give heed to the efforts being made by conservators of wild life and the great out-of-doors, and co-operate, their children will escape the lot of some of New York's school pupils.

So lacking are the facilities for training children in the ways of nature that about half of 1,200 of the pupils who were examined in nature study gave the name of "any star" as John Gilbert, Mary Pickford or Janet Gaynor, according to the director of nature garden work in the New York City schools.

"Can children be educated, not knowing the grass in the field, or the birds in the treetops, or the fish in the running brooks? This denuding the city child of the major part of his nature heritage has led to a woeful ignorance on his part of the simplest commonplace of the natural world. A 12-year-old boy called a rose he was wearing 'a tulip.' Twenty-one of the pupils out of a sixth year class of thirty-three pupils reported that the 'Milky Way' was found in candy shops. About 50 per cent of 1,200 children examined in nature gave the name of 'any star' as John Gilbert, or Mary Pickford, or Janet Gaynor. Less than 3 per cent of the same group of children could tell what was the most intelligent animal.

California valley quail are on the decrease in the Mount Diablo district, according to a report from T. K. Duncan, warden of the Division of Fish and Game. This territory was once considered among the best quail country in the state, but during the past few years there has been a noticeable scarcity of birds. The geographical nature of the country in this section makes it an excellent place for the propagation of quail.

The reason for the shortage of birds is rather difficult to explain, according to Duncan. Several theories have been advanced which have to do with water and food shortages and poison campaigns on destructive enemies, but so far no definite proof has been offered as a solution of the problem.

It is definitely known that the Mount Diablo country is becoming very popular for hikers and picnickers. This growth is quite evident since the highways were improved in the district. Just what effect this advance of civilization is having on the bird and animal life of the mountain is not known—naturalists maintain that such a condition is regulated by the attitude of the out-of-door public.

Definite steps are being taken to determine, if possible, the causes of quail shortages in various sections of the state, and it is hoped to supply a suitable remedy. Full co-operation of everyone is necessary, however, to carry on a successful program in our fish and game conservation.

OUR STATE DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON'S DAY

Nothing illustrates more clearly the great growth of the United States since George Washington's day than the enormously increased activities of our government. As one evidence of this, the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission points to the expansion in the United States Department of State since its beginnings as a Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Continental Congress.

The first secretary of that committee, which might be called our first foreign secretary, was the famous Thomas Paine who wrote the lines, "These are the times that try men's souls." The state of Colonial finances at the time is reflected in the fact that Congress was able to offer him the modest salary of seventy dollars a month.

This was in 1777, and Paine held the position for two years. At the end of that period Congress dropped him for publishing a state paper which it thought he should have kept confidential. After that the Continental Congress decided to manage its own foreign affairs. It soon found itself in confusion and chaos, however, as a result of clumsy committee handling of a rapid expansion in its dealings with other countries. Accordingly, in 1781, Robert Livingston of New York was made secretary of the Congressional Committee on Foreign Affairs. He received the respectable salary of $4,000 a year, and was given powers closely approaching those of a present day Secretary of State.

To Livingston goes much of the credit for skillful management of our diplomacy during the later period of the Revolution, but in two years time Livingston complained to Congress that his living expenses were $3,000 more than his yearly salary. Besides, he was honored with election as chancellor of New York, and under pressure of this lure to another field, he resigned. Another period of chaos in our foreign relations ensued, until John Jay assumed the duties of foreign secretary, with still larger powers, which included authority to frame treaties with other nations.

Finally, in 1789, the Constitution having been adopted and the new United States having been formally established, Congress passed the act creating the Department of State as we know it today. President Washington appointed Thomas Jefferson the first Secretary of State, but as Jefferson was away at the time, it was six months before he assumed the duties of his office.

Today the Department of State receives from Congress an appropriation of more than $17,000,000, whereas the first annual budget submitted by Secretary of State Jefferson called for an outlay of $8,008.50. At this almost amusingly moderate cost to the country, the Department of State under Jefferson ran almost everything. In Jefferson's own words, the department "embraced the whole domestic administration, war and finance excepted."

The Secretary of State then transmitted all commissions to Federal officers appointed by the President, except military commands. He kept the great seal of the United States, and promulgated all the laws passed by Congress. He even ran the Post Office service, until President Washington decided that this belonged to the Treasury Department. Nevertheless the Secretary of State continued to manage the United States mint.

He had control of copyrights and patents. He took the census and issued all maps and charts. Many of the acts of pardon passed through his hands. He conducted all our territorial affairs, collected the customs, issued consular reports, and exercised authority over the sale of public lands. And all this domestic business, together with our foreign affairs, Jefferson managed with the assistance of two under secretaries, four clerks, two messengers, and a French interpreter. One item of his budget calculated to raise a smile in these great days was an annual outlay of $50 for firewood. And all this at an annual cost of $8,000.

Yet, even now, when our country has become the greatest of world powers, and when many of these original duties of the State Department have been taken over by other great departments, like those of the Post Office, the Interior, and Commerce, the United States still requires perhaps the most highly organized of all foreign offices for the conduct of its steadily enlarging relations with the world.

It is one of the startling contrasts sure to arise in every American mind in 1932 when the nation celebrates the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington, the man who, more than any other, set going this vast political development.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1931 NUMBER 2

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Was One of Them
Tommy: "Mother, let me go to the zoo to see the monkeys."
Mother: "Why, my boy, what an idea! Imagine wanting to see the monkeys when your Aunt Betsy is here!"

S. O. S.
See Our Stuff.

Hair and Hardware
Ruth: "Who is that fellow with the long hair?"
Eddie: "He's a fellow from Yale."
Ruth: "Oh, I have often heard of those Yale locks."

Jailer (to prisoner awaiting execution):
"You have an hour of grace."
Prisoner: "O. K. Bring her in."

Own a Home
Without a home and without the permanence associated with ownership, many of the finest contacts and experiences of life are impossible. Instead of being the tenant in the next house the owner is a part of the social, religious and political life of his community.

"An old colored man," said a minister, "came to me one day with the request that I pray for his floating kidney."
"Why, Sam," I remonstrated, "how do you expect me to pray for some particular thing like that?"
"Wal, parson," Sam retorted, "las' week you all was a-prayin' for de loose livers."

Stampede
A lady motorist was driving along a country road when she spied a couple of repair men climbing telephone poles. "The fools," she exclaimed to her companion, "they must think I never drove a car before."

Wearly Willie: "Believe it or not, ma'am, I'm not a tramp. I'm merely walking 'round the country for a series of prizes."
Lady of the House: "And what are they?"
Wearly Willie: "Any one who wishes to contribute a ham sandwich may do so."
